Manager's Commentary

The Fund's substantial YTD outperformance versus the VNI to the end of June was further eroded in August as focus seemingly turned to the level of the index rather than the quality of its components. Of the three standout performers of the past five or six weeks only Masan Group (MSN) has any notable fundamental justification for such a move, but its consistent failure to deliver on its promises over the years has meant that it is rather narrowly held. Sabeco (SAB) seems to be moving towards a secondary offering of the government's stake, but one wonders how close the price for a majority stake will be to the current valuation of the roughly 5% of the shares currently traded. As for Faros Construction (ROS), well, we're not really sure what Faros is. It's certainly not much like any other US$ 2.5 billion company we've ever seen.

In total, however, movements in the 3 got the VNI above 800 points. Hopefully the next leg up has a more qualitative feel.
